In Brief...

NASA is staying on its campus to develop a new building that will house its Instrument Development Facility.

The coming 53,280 square foot, two-story building is the first phase of a long-range redevelopment of the 10-acre Water Tower property at the Greenbelt campus. NASA will house almost 700 employees in the building. As it is, NASA's instrument development work is spread across several buildings, a proposition that NASA calls 'expensive and risky' because of the highly sensitive nature of the components.

...Catholic Charities is putting one of its food bank divisions into a new location. After occupying a building on Lawrence Place in Hyattsville for 25 years, the group has signed a lease for 20,900 square feet at 3222 Hubbard Road in Landover.

Catholic will fill the space with its SHARE organization, which sells reduced-price groceries to people in need.

Andy Mayr of NAI Michael represented Catholic Charities, while Brian Watts of Transwestern represented the landlord.

Timberlake Buys in Lanham Builder to Start 138 Townhouses

Timberlake Homes will get to work quickly on its newest acquisition – townhouses in Lanham.

The Annapolis builder bought 138 lots on Good Luck Road near Greenbelt Road from a partnership headed by Palisades Development for $6.5 million recently. Because Palisades had pushed the entitlements well ahead for 'Wood Glen,' Timberlake expects to be starting development soon and selling later this spring.

It'll give Timberlake a second active county job, for it is building now in Timber Ridge, a Clinton project where it has built and sold lots for several years but is now nearing the end of the job. Timber Ridge has proven fruitful this year for the company, with 29 contracts written.

Timberlake expects to start in the $330's on the Wood Glen towns. Lanham is largely competition-light for new homes right now, and one has to travel a few miles to the Greenbelt Metro Station for a direct townhouse competitor, in Ryan Homes. But the partial conversion of the Greentec office park on Route 193 to residential, by Douglas Development, is in the works, and may spawn some competition to Timberlake before it is finished.

Two years ago, Palisades had seen an opportunity for a different use in the undeveloped ground in the southeast quadrant of Good Luck Road and Greenbelt Road. The land is zoned C-O, commonly an office zone but one that also allows towns in certain circumstances. By designing a plan for the attached units as well as 4,000 feet of commercial, Palisades met the standards and could move ahead.

Timberlake, meanwhile, will step into a county townhouse market that has moved upscale in a way. Third quarter settlements clocked in at an average of over $400,000 per townhouse, a new milestone for that market. It isn't that existing communities are seeing an increase in price, but rather that builders have steadily focused on more upscale towns over the last two years.

It's to the point that towns closing below $300,000, a staple of the market in 2013, are barely registering now.

Richard Samit, Bruce Winston and Aaron Lebovitz at Fraser Forbes Real Estate Services brokered the Wood Glen transaction .

Liberty's Switch At Smithfield

Liberty Property wants to redevelop the former Smithfield Ham property, once it wins a zoning change.

The Malvern, Pa. developer outlined its plans in a zoning amendment submitted recently at the county. If successful, Liberty would knock down the present 132,000 square foot building and replace it with 205,000 feet of new distribution space.

5801 Columbia Park Road was ham heaven for years, a regular pork paradise, as Smithfield prepped and shipped thousands of pounds of ham products daily. But it shuttered the plant in 2013 as part of a larger corporate move to consolidate in Kentucky and North Carolina.

Liberty could probably develop even if it doesn't win the zoning change, for the ground is now zoned I-3, or 'industrial/employment park.' But it wants the 'heavy industrial' allowed in the I-2 zone that adorned the 17.9 acre property until the 2010 Subregion 4 master plan.

Liberty argues the County Council made a mistake in changing the zoning in 2010, particularly when it sought to create more compatibility with residential neighborhoods. Liberty says the Smithfield tract fell into an area the master plan called a 'healthy industrial area,' and that its zoning and development potential should have been left in place.

Liberty last surfaced in Prince George's when it bought 18.3 acres in Cheverly last year. The developer paid $4.75 million for 5800 Sheriff Road, with plans to build a 225,000 square foot warehouse.

Lidl a Camp Springs Candidate

Slowly, the potential sites for grocer Lidl are seeping out.

The latest is a Camp Springs location, where a partnership controlling 13 acres wants to position the grocer with a Wawa convenience store and new townhouses.

The Camp Springs Allentown LLC, headed by Capitol Heights-based Velocity Capital, controls five parcels in the northeast quadrant of Allentown Road and Route 5. Zoned for mixed-use, the larger piece is improved with a few houses used as offices, including an insurance company and a Palm Reader (she probably foresaw the new development).

Velocity would build 58,800 square feet of retail in four buildings, roughly along Perrie Lane, and 64 townhouses to the rear.

Lidl has spawned lots of rumors about where its headed, but the firmest option yet is its planned Bowie store on the Melvin Motors property along Route 450. In Camp Springs, it would apparently occupy the largest of the four planned buildings at 37,000 square feet.

Both Builders Now Open at Westphalia TC

With utilities finally in place, the first two builders at Westphalia Town Center are now officially open.

Both Ryan Homes and Haverford Homes have had their models largely delivered at the Upper Marlboro community for months, but delays in getting utilities into the houses kept sales at bay. That appears to be a thing of the past, as both builders have updated their websites with their Westphalia blasts.

Right now, Westphalia Town Center is just the two townhouse builders, but it ultimately will be 310 acres including thousands of homes and a sizable commercial component. It is Walton Development's largest project locally.

Of the two builders, Ryan is the lower-priced, looking for buyers with its 'Hepburn' model priced from the $290's. That's a two-bedroom, one-car garage unit. Ryan's three-bedroom models run from the $330's.

Haverford opens from $317,990, that for the three-bedroom 'Davidson I.'

Utility issues have hit both Westphalia and Parkside next door, but both seem to have surmounted that development problem now.

Didn't hit the Powerball? Gotta keep working?

NOS is Newest Tenant for PS

A newly signed lease in Beltsville means the flex space at Ammendale Business Campus is fully leased.

National Office Systems (NOS) signed a lease for 17,000 square feet, closing out the last available flex space that landlord PS Business Parks had in its 'Campus' off Route 1. It continues to lease the office building.

The NOS deal puts the storage and filing company into 6804 Virginia Manor Road, and in the company of fellow tenants like Leaf Guard and Edifice.

Mike Royce and Mike Mates of Avison Young represented PS, while Danny Sheridan of JLL brought the tenant.

Towns are Coming

The key vote for new townhouses in Landover clicked into place at a District Council meeting last week.

Instead of 55,756 square feet of retail space, the Klein Bellehaven LLC, an affiliate of Pikesville-based Klein Enterprises, can now officially develop about five acres off St. Joseph's Drive near Route 202 with 65 townhouses.

As the Planning Board had before it, the District Council agreed that Klein's proposed towns are a better use of the ground than the retail first contemplated. Klein argued that Woodmore Towne Centre and other retail outlets had stolen the retail thunder of the planned neighborhood center, rendering it infeasible.

While Klein still needed approval of its conceptual plan, the developer had gone ahead and submitted its site plan, and has been negotiating with an unnamed national builder to take the lots.

Class B Apartments the Beneficiary

It's a good time to own Class B multi-family, and investor interest locally reflects it. If it was the 5th Dimension writing this newsletter, they'd say that Jupiter has aligned with Mars for the sector right now (and that love will steer the stars). Here are the key findings on the Class B market, courtesy of Delta Associates' latest market report:

- The Washington Metropolitan area is adding jobs at a faster rate than in recent years; however, it is lower-wage jobs growing fastest, thus underscoring demand for Class B units;
- Delta expects the trend of a preference for renting to continue; housing prices are up only about 1.2 percent for the 12-months ended in September, and Delta expects 2016 to be similarly modest;
- Record absorptions mean that Class B vacancy rates are down to 2.8 percent, from 3.2 percent one year ago. Class B low-rise apartments in Suburban Maryland are at 2.4 percent vacancy;
- But the good times won't last forever: Class A deliveries in coming quarters will test vacancy and absorption levels, and 'may dampen Class B rent growth opportunities,' says Delta.

No Opposition to Westphalia Row Change

Amending the final phase at Westphalia Row to 66 townhouses and a smaller retail building met little resistance at the Planning Board.

A Haverford Homes partnership called Westphalia Row Partners LLC has approvals for a big block of density, including 250 multi-family units and a 57,600 square foot retail/office building at the Upper Marlboro project on Sansbury Road and Ritchie Marlboro Road. But the Rockville builder says a far lower density, based on an urban-style townhouse product, is more compatible with the first two phases of traditional towns at the 'Row.' Haverford wants to build 16-foot, four-story, rear-loaded towns in the final section.

As for the nearly 60,000 feet of commercial – with structured parking – Haverford says that isn't economically feasible. Instead, Haverford proposes 10,000 feet of retail in a single-story building. The Planning Board agreed.

Haverford and two lot-buying builders, Dan Ryan and Richmond American, have largely worked their way through the first two phases, getting in the low to mid-$300's for the towns.

Elsewhere, Conifer Realty settled on the ground for its next county job. Columbia-based Conifer paid $1.35 million for 65 units in what will become 'Brinkley Hill,' in Temple Hills. Conifer will set aside the majority of the units for families making between 30 and 60 percent of area median.

The newly-active developer trimmed the density back to 65 lots from the originally approved 74, and redesigned them as mostly quad-style units with some townhouses. The deal is the second in Prince George's for Conifer, as it plans 120 units of senior housing on 4.3 acres at 2011 Brooks Drive in Capitol Heights. The Archdiocese of Washington sold the property, and was represented by Jeff Ludwig and Kahu Ludwig of NAI Michael, while Barbara Richman Kahn of the same firm represented buyer Conifer.

Levittown Lots Concern Bowie

Concerns that the 'Levittown' lots in Bowie grow ripe for redevelopment are pushing City officials toward some kind of protective plan.

At the heart of these concerns are the fact that many of the homes are built on lots sized well above the minimum density for the zone, particularly those in the R-55 zone. Where the lot minimums run down to 6500 square feet, plenty of original Levitt homes occupy lots of 14,000 or 15,000 feet.

Re-subdivisions have been few to date, but as more of the homes approach 50 years old, the prospect grows, and City planners fear incompatible smaller lots amongst the long-standing Levitt homes.

Thus, the City has offered several alternatives, hoping the County Council or county planners seize on one. Those include creating a new zone with a 10,000 foot minimum size, passing a text amendment to apply to Levitt lots, or creating a Neighborhood Conservation zone.

Fastenal Grows

Fastenal Inc. expanded its Beltsville footprint with a newly-written deal.

The company that supplies everything from office chair to trashcan liners took 17,357 square feet at 10225 – 10227 Southard Drive. It's a second location for Fastenal, which is already over on Sunnyside. In both cases, Minkoff Development is the landlord.

Ken Fellows and Erik Pedersen of Edge Commercial Real Estate repped the landlord, while Chris DeLuca of McHenry Real Estate brought the tenant.
